EXPERIENCE

The gloves will be off for England's Southern Hemisphere challengers when the Pacific Islanders, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand visit Twickenham this autumn.

After Rugby World Cup 2007, there's plenty of unfinished business to be taken care of, promising four compelling contests. Mike Burton's hospitality packages for the 2008 Autumn International Series match the gravity of these games and are designed to provide the very best in corporate entertainment.

The Pacific Islanders bring the best of Samoa, Fiji and Tonga together to form a combined team for the mouthwatering opening contest. Defeated by England in the quarter-finals of the World Cup, Australia will be looking for revenge in the second test of the series.

Next, it's England's opportunity to settle the score against South Africa before the final game where New Zealand will be out to re-establish themselves as the dominant force in world rugby. It all adds up to a Twickenham test series that's not to be missed.

ENGLAND v PACIFIC ISLANDERS £395
SATURDAY 8 NOVEMBER 2008

Casting aside traditional rivalries, Fiji, Samoa and Tonga unite to create a fearsome line-up. Vibrant performances from the individual Island nations set the Rugby World Cup alight in 2007 with both Samoa and Tonga giving England a valiant run for their money. Always a terrific spectacle, the Islanders will seize their chance to shine on the international stage once more.

ENGLAND v AUSTRALIA £595
SATURDAY 15 NOVEMBER 2008

Encounters with Australia are always highly charged and fiercely fought. Having lost to England in two consecutive Rugby World Cups and at their last Twickenham clash in 2005, the Wallabies will be hoping to hit the form that won them both tests against England during 2006, down under.

ENGLAND v SOUTH AFRICA £595
SATURDAY 22 NOVEMBER 2008

The Springboks are now Rugby World Cup Winners for the second time. Unashamedly aggressive and with arguably the most destructive pack in world rugby, the Boks will be determined to reassert themselves against England after two Rugby World Cup wins and two victories on South African soil in 2007. For England, it has to be payback time.

ENGLAND v NEW ZEALAND £595
SATURDAY 29 NOVEMBER 2008

A formidable force in world rugby with a winning record against every international rugby team, the All Blacks are fast, physical and ferociously competitive. Following a poor showing by their own high standards in Rugby World Cup 2007, New Zealand will desperately want a repeat of their 2006 win over England at Twickenham.

ENGLAND v ITALY £495

From whipping boys to dark horses, Italy have established themselves as a competitive force in the RBS 6 Nations Championship in recent years. Hungry for their first win over England, and with confidence running high after their narrowest loss to date in 2008, the Azzurri will believe they can taste victory this time around.

England can expect a ferocious and passionate challenge and must extinguish the Italian fire to avoid an upset.

ENGLAND v FRANCE £695

Renowned for their sensational performances but notoriously unpredictable away from home 'Les Bleus' travel to Twickenham with a team packed with blistering pace and Gallic flair.

England will have to be at their very best up front to stop the marauding French back row building momentum and releasing their scintillating backs in what promises to be an enthralling encounter.

ENGLAND v SCOTLAND £695

Whenever the Scottish travel to Twickenham, it's a blistering encounter, and Scotland are sure to unleash their passionate best for this Calcutta Cup clash.

Capable of beating anyone on their day, Scotland will relish the opportunity to spoil the party at Twickenham. England will need an emphatic performance to overcome a motivated and well drilled Scottish team with a dogged defence and plenty of individual talent.
